

MEDICAL DENTAL OFFICER

As a Dental Officer, you'll be in charge of primary dental healthcare for the entire ship's company, whether on shore or at sea. By maintaining high standards of dental health among your crewmates, you'll have a major influence on their effectiveness and morale, which can be seriously affected by even minor dental problems. On large ships, you'll have a fully-fitted dental surgery, plus access to the sick bay's facilities. On smaller ships, you'll manage a portable dental unit that travels with you. You'll normally work alongside your own Dental Nurse, with the support of a qualified Dental Hygienist. You may also have an opportunity for specialist training in areas such as periodontics or endodontics. As well as your clinical expertise, you'll gain other valuable skills you can transfer, including leadership and management. Plus, since you could find yourself serving in a combat or disaster zone, you could be trained for other vital operational roles on board ship, which might include flight-deck control, firefighting or advanced life support.

What we're looking for

Your main role is maintaining the highest standards of dental care, so you must be highly skilled in preventative dentistry and able to deal with the full range of clinical problems. You must also have leadership potential and develop the 'people' skills needed to manage a small team in demanding and sometimes dangerous conditions. You'll also have to inspire confidence in patients at all levels, from new recruits and junior ratings to senior officers.

Basic training

You'll begin your career at Britannia Royal Naval College (BRNC) in Dartmouth, learning leadership and teamwork skills and the principles of command and management. Alongside your academic studies, you'll spend time at sea to get first-hand experience of daily life on a warship.

Professional training

After BRNC, you'll go to HMS Nelson in Portsmouth as a new-entry Dental Officer. Here, you'll be introduced to Defence Dental Services routines and administration. If you're a new or recent graduate, you'll enter the Defence Dental Services vocational training scheme and complete a year of structured training supervised by an accredited trainer. Throughout your career, you'll go on all sorts of training schemes to keep you up to date with current teaching and scientific developments, so you can follow up your own specialist interests.

If you have the opportunity to stay with us beyond your short commission, there are opportunities to gain higher qualifications with fully-funded training. You may also be chosen to serve with the Royal Marines, in which case you could carry out the demanding All Arms Commando Course and earn the coveted green beret.

Pay and conditions

Royal Navy pay compares well with similar civilian jobs. As well as basic pay, in time you may qualify for extra money for special skills, when you're promoted and when you're away at sea.

We also offer an excellent pension scheme, six weeks' paid holiday a year and free medical and dental care. As a Dental Officer, you'll join the Royal Navy on a short commission. You will have the opportunity to apply for selection for a medium commission of 18 years, or for a full commission up to the age of 58. If you want to leave, you can send us your request one year before completing your specified return of service.

Promotion

As a Dental Officer, you may enter at a more senior rank than other officers, depending on your experience. You'll be promoted to Surgeon Lieutenant (D) and Surgeon Lieutenant Commander (D) automatically, as long as you pass your professional training and perform to the necessary level. After that, you may be selected on merit for promotion to Surgeon Commander (D) and beyond.

Skills for life

During your professional training and throughout your career, you can gain qualifications accredited by academic institutions and leading professional organisations.

Sport and recreation

We can offer you a fantastic range of sports and other activities. All our ships and shore bases have superb sports and fitness facilities and we play a huge number of team and individual games. You'll also have the chance to go on adventurous training, which could be anything from a jungle expedition to mountaineering and caving to parachuting.
