

WARFARE

WARFARE OFFICER

As a Warfare Officer, the outcome of the mission and the safety of your ship and crew will be in your hands. As well as being a decisive leader, you'll be a skilled seaman and navigator, able to handle your ship safely in all conditions and represent the Captain on the bridge as an Officer of the Watch. Once you have some experience, you'll have the opportunity to specialise as a Fighter Controller, Hydrographic, Meteorological and Oceanographic Officer, Mine Warfare or Mine Clearance Diving Officer. As Principal Warfare Officer, you'll be directly responsible for taking your ship and other units under its command into action. If your ultimate goal is to command your own ship, this is a good place to start. Show us you have the talent and qualities we're looking for and it could be yours by your early thirties.

What we're looking for

In this job, above all else, you must be able to make safe decisions quickly and calmly, even under pressure. You'll often be carrying out several tasks at the same time, so you'll need to be organised, flexible and adaptable. We must be able to rely on you to perform at your very best at any time of day or night. Although a potentially outstanding leader, you'll also need to be part of the team and play your part in your ship's peacetime, as well as operational, roles and tasks.

Basic training

You'll begin your career at Britannia Royal Naval College (BRNC) in Dartmouth. You'll spend one year here, learning leadership and teamwork skills and the principles of command and management. You will then put these into practice during several exercises on Dartmoor and the River Dart. Alongside your academic studies, you'll be taught to handle small ships and you will spend 10 weeks at sea, working in every department on board, learning how they operate and gaining first-hand experience of life in a warship.

Professional training

After your basic training, you'll join a ship and gain more sea experience, while you work towards your Navigational Watch Certificate as an Officer of the Watch. You'll consolidate everything you've learned so far on the Initial Warfare Officers' Course (IWOC), which you'll generally attend about 2½ years after joining Britannia Royal Naval College. After the IWOC course, you may choose to specialise, or continue to develop your career as a General Service Warfare Officer. You may also have the opportunity to progress to the Principal Warfare Officer's course – a big step towards commanding your own ship.

Pay and conditions

Royal Navy pay compares well with similar civilian jobs. As well as basic pay, you'll get extra money for special skills, when you're promoted and when you're away at sea. We also offer an excellent pension scheme, six weeks' paid holiday a year and free medical and dental care.

You'll generally join us on an initial commission, which is for 12 years. You may have the opportunity to serve beyond this, depending on what you want and the needs of the Royal Navy. If you want to leave, you can send us your request one year before completing your specified return of service. How long this return of service is, will depend on the branch you join. You will need to give 12 months' notice.

Promotion

For all officers, the opportunities for promotion are excellent. To help you with your career, we'll offer you plenty of feedback, encouragement and training. You'll be promoted to Lieutenant automatically as long as you pass your professional training and perform to the level needed. After that, you'll be chosen on merit for promotion to Lieutenant Commander and beyond.

Skills for life

During your professional training and throughout your career, you'll gain qualifications accredited by academic institutions and leading professional and industry organisations. All are recognised internationally and will be highly valued by civilian employers. This will greatly improve your prospects of a second career if you decide to leave the service.

Sport and recreation

We can offer you a fantastic range of sports and other activities. All our ships and shore bases have superb sports and fitness facilities and we play a huge number of team and individual games. You'll also have the chance to go on adventurous training, which could be anything from a jungle expedition to mountaineering and caving to parachuting.
